

Global Medicine Author guidelines

Your story in Global Medicine?

Global Medicine welcomes journalistic articles on any issue related to Global Health, but we also encourage students to share their experiences abroad in an elective or research report. Furthermore, we welcome columns, book reviews and public health related project reports. When considering to submit an article for publication in Global Medicine, please first closely read the author guidelines below before and after finishing writing. Because we receive more articles than we are able to publish in our magazine, we can't guarantee your submission will be placed.

Of course you will be informed personally when we receive your article. It is also possible to send in pictures for our photo gallery.

More information can be found at www.globalmedicine.nl

Maximum length

The maximum length for in-depth articles is 1200 words, reports should not exceed the limit of 1000 words and for columns and/or book/film/web reviews we employ a maximum of 400 words. Of your submission contains more words we will not accept it.

When writing an elective report, please keep in mind that we do not publish travel reports on personal experiences, but expect insightful information on for example the (global health related) research you conducted or a specific aspect of the health care system in the country you have worked in.

Written in English

All submissions should be written in English (UK spelling). Global Medicine works with native proof readers before publication but we do appreciate your efforts to optimize the spelling and grammar of your article before submission.

Pictures

If you have any high quality pictures to accompany your article, please attach them with your submission. All visuals must be free from copyrights or submitted with the permission for publication by the author. Attachments must be high resolution JPEG or TIFF files.

Patient consent

If you write about or hand in pictures of people (especially: patients) you have worked with, a specific consent is needed before publication is possible. If no consent is handed over, Global Medicine will not publish the article or will edit out the particular part.

Reference guidelines

Please pay attention to reference guidelines on our website www.globalmedicine.nl.

Our editors

Global Medicine is not peer reviewed but the editors will read contributions critically and may suggest alterations or shortening. Unless explicitly stated by the editor, there is no guarantee of publication of your article. If your article is accepted for publication, it will normally undergo changes before it hits the pages. If we make major changes to your article, we will send it to you to approve.

Please note that if you submit work to Global Medicine, you may not submit it elsewhere for publication without our explicit consent.

Submission

Submit your manuscript as a Word file (font Arial, font size 11, line space 1.5) attached to an e-mail to editor@globalmedicine.nl.
